

Begun in 2016 by The New York Academy of Medicine Library, #ColorOurCollections is an annual coloring festival where libraries, museums, archives, and other cultural institutions share free coloring content featuring items from their collections. This event typically takes place on the first full week of February.

The Richardson-Sloane Special Collections Center created its first coloring book in 2018. The contents of our coloring books feature illustrations from Iowa history books, the works of Patrick J. Costello, advertisements from city directories, images related to bodies of water, farm life, fairy tales from our Children's exhibit collection, and illustrations from the 1925 Davenport High School Yearbook.

Celebrate #ColorOurCollections with us by revisiting some of our favorite coloring pages from over the years!
